Funding

No

In early 2016 ASC Training & Development ran a series of successful pilot workshops for government employees involved in working in compliance roles that sometimes brought them in contact with angry, frustrated or irrational members of the public.

This training can now be offered to any person who, in the course of their work, may be confronted by difficult and potentially aggressive individuals or groups.

Description

As an authorised officer, warden, or compliance regulator, your ability to manage conflict is essential because it:

- enhances professionalism
- keeps you safe, and
- Increases compliance.

Outcomes

This workshop aims to provide participants with the information and skills required to effectively intervene and facilitate positive outcomes when faced with angry and frustrated behaviour from members of the public.

These behaviours may occur in the field or office.

Who should attend?

The course is specifically designed for:

- Field Task Orientated staff
- Authorised Officers
